SAILMAKING IN 1954

Ralph Silsby, sailmaker, operates a sail loft located on Union Wharf, in Fairhaven. His loft is unique in that it is located on the ground floor of the building and almost always such enterprises are on the top floor. The atmosphere is the same friendly one found in any loft, however. Busy as everyone is, they enjoy chatting with a visitor while they work.

There is, I believe, an interesting story in every shop, and on every street corner, and I knew there must be one here in this busy loft. I asked Mr. Silsby how he happened to take up sailmaking as a trade. "I learned my sailmaking from my father, who learned from his dad, and he from his," he replied, "I come from a long line of sailmakers, and am proud of the craftsmanship in our sails and the boats they powered". He told me that Bath, Maine was a famous place for sailmaking and outfitting, as Mattapoisett was for shipbuilding, and that was where he learned the trade. His father was with the firm of Wilson and Silsby, there and made sails for cup defenders, "Defender","Columbia", and Thomas Lawson's "Independence".

Not many shops are now operating, but back a few years, most big seaports had five or six. He recalled that Bath had six and Boothbay Harbor had four when he was learning the trade. Coming to Fairhaven, he opened his doors on Union Wharf in 1932. Since then, he has made sails and sent them all over the United States. It was his sails that drove the "Wentworth", whose mainsail was quite a feat of sailmaking art.

Mr. Silsby said dryly, "There are several steps in sailmaking. You bid for the order, draw the plans, cut, sew and finish. You are then ready for the most important part--getting the money". The size and purpose of the boat being fitted is taken into account to determine the weight of duck to be used. To give the sail strength, rope is used at points of strain.

He recalled that he had worked on new sails for the "Carroll Deering"and the three master, "Haskell".

The "Haskell" sailed from Boothbay Harbor on her maiden voyage one bright sunny day. That's the story. Neither she or her crew were ever heard from since.

The "Carroll Deering", also on her maiden voyage was found abondoned at sea. The Coast Guard tried to save her by towing her into a lagoon only to have a tropical storm strike. She foundered on the spot.

In his experience, Mr. Silsby has made sails of all descriptions. Class boat sails such as Lightnings, Comets, Sea Gulls, Penguins, Stars, Dux Ducks, Wee Scottie, Hereshoff 12 and 15, Mercury 110, Indians, Nat'l on D, Yankee on D, O boats, Wood Pussy and many others, as well as a large number of Fisherman's Riding Sails.

My pleasant chat with Mr. Silsby did not take so very long, but it was a rare treat for me. Sailmaking, I found,was an art which required many years of practice and experience. The Sailmaker, I found to be an artist who thoroughly enjoyed his trade, and very willing to teach others from his wide experience. I don't believe that sails will ever be replaced completely by power, and I hope there will always be men like Mr. Silsby to carry on a trade, learned from father to son, quietly, unassumingly, but with a genuine pride in their work.

POEM

Mattapoisett has a poet,
Murray Tuttle is his name,
Very likely he dunno it,
But Marion has the same.

Marion's poet's name is May,
Like Murray, she declares,
Her town's the best on Buzzards Bay,
For folks to shed their cares.

Both towns have harbors beautiful,
As one would wish to see,
From earth's far corners, they both pull
Folks famed and fancy-free.

Among the famed Mattapoisett lost,
Which worked to Marion's gain,
Was President Grover Cleveland,
Who liked ways quaint and plain.

When looking for just such a place,
'Tis said that Mrs. C.
First stopped at Mattapoisett,
But was not given the key.

How Marion natives giggled,
When Cleveland landed there,
Because their sister Town had lost,
A celebrity unaware.

But both these towns have features that
Attract folks far and near,
Yet, Murray never has grown fat,
While I,- please shed a tear!

(The difference is that thar invigorating air in Marion!).

Nom de Plume,
May B. Rimes.

AN OLD MATTAPOISETT RETURNER

Mrs. J. C. Waterston (Alica Atkinson), daughter of Mrs. R. W. Atkinson, who has spent many summers here, is having a one man show of her paintings at the Pottery this week.

Since her marriage, she has been painting and teaching at Brooks School, North Andover in the winter, and the South County Art Association in Kingston, R. I. in the summer.

Her paintings have been seen at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, Transharr Gallery, New York City and the Margaret Brown Gallery in Boston. She has had one man shows in Boston, Andover, Paris and Kingston, R. I.

She attended the Art Students League and the Fontainbleau School of Fine Arts, and painted for several years in Woodstock, N. Y.

BOAT LAUNCHED

Naturally you have looked over the new D. M. Tuttle 20 foot cabin cruiser "Mar-ray".

Nice trim little craft with a look of staunchness about her, isn't she?

D. M. or Tutt as we know him better and Charlie Avila started building her the last week of December, 1953 in Charlie's garage on Oakland St. From here, she was delivered to Burr Bros. for final adjustments and a recent launching.

The cute name is for D. M.'s two children. Lots of luck and good fishing, Tutt.

PETER MORRIS INJURES FOOT

Paul Morris, son of Mr. & Mrs. Roland Morris of Crystal Spring Rd., is visiting his aunt and uncle, Mr. & Mrs. A. W. Clark of Ledyard, Conn. He likes it so well, he plans to stay until the middle of August.

His brother, Peter, has had bad luck since Paul went away, and is sort of laid up with foot injuries. Helping his mom, Marjorie Morris at the Auction Block, he managed to get a heavy sink dropped on one foot, and evened up his injuries by getting the other foot caught in the spokes of his bicycle injuring it quite badly. He's traveling in bare socks for a while, and we hope it won't be long before he'll be back in good shape again.

If you have never used it, you'll be pleasantly surprised when you use Larcoloid Enamel made by Carmote, the manufacturers of World Famous Kotall Paints. Larcoloid has a plastic base, which enables it to be used either inside or outside, and provides it with great covering ability.

It dries quickly and many boat owners have found out that it provides wonderful protection from the elements. This amazing Enamel comes in over two dozen colors and in sizes from $\frac{1}{4}$ pint to a gallon.

Larcoloid is being used in so many different ways that it has become known as the "all purpose paint". You can also buy the other famous Carmote products at
